Imagine what it would be like if the nursing profession was able to create a worldwide credential that qualifies nurse practitioners, educators and researchers to successfully work together through international clinical standards of practice and universal ethics alongside each other as partners?

MARY JO BULBROOK

Can we create an international license to cross ridge state and national boundaries? I believe academia, nursing organizations and healthcare institutions are ready for this possibility. What if we start with a couple of countries with a demonstration model of a cross country license qualification? Science has shown we are all connected energetically as ONE – what one thinks as welcoming, trusting, and caring will open new doors.

The nursing profession could be the iconic leader to illustrate how CIH is family centered with open congruent communication vs. a pharmaceutical model with the MD as the keeper of a person's health and well-being. Imagine nursing becoming the hand held cell phone in every home providing access to innovations that crosses national and international boundaries available to rich and poor!

Energy therapies have demonstrated their effectiveness and cost reductions through research. Healthcare is a universal value that should be available to all. I believe we as nurses can be and will be inspired to step up and step out to provide leadership to a CIH International Caring Multi-dimensional Model to serve the world community from its current structure and values.

Inherent in the world species is a collective CIH force field that once acknowledged and tapped into can point the way to innovations that demonstrate successful outcomes and achieve excitement, unity and coherence of spirit that transforms health/wellness care. I'm all in – are you?
